vented me from making a fresh start as an assistant bookkeeper in another city. Talent will out.

I miss my wife and kids, of course—not to mention my car. But I think I could probably submerge my grief in the shallow life of a swinging bachelor, if only I could afford somewhat flashier clothes, a more opulent apartment. A month ago I ordered some back numbers of a true-crime magazine carrying my picture, and I've distributed these in a number of local doctors' and dentists' offices, where some co-worker of mine is bound to see one eventually.

I know it's wrong, but I need the money.
